Explains the Fifty Million Union Pacific Pool, By Saying Harriman Instigated the Move With the Idea of Holding Control of Road—Caustically States that the Interest Felt by the Men "Friendly" to Him, Was Long Since Obvious as Coming from Ulterior Motives.

New York, Nov. 14.—Sensations flew thick when James Hazen Hyde, former Vice President of the Equitable Life Insurance Co., and the man whose testimony has been long anticipated, took the witness stand before the Armstrong Commission today. Composed, deliberate and calm, the former official of the Equitable simply told his story—and his auditors were startled. Explaining the famous Mercantile Trust loan, in the next breath, he boldly charged Harriman, the railroad magnate, and H. C. Frick, with attempting conspiracy to get him out of the country. It was along this line of actions prompted by ulterior motives, said Hyde, that called forth the idea of his own operations for the French Ambassadorship—an idea which originated he declared with Frick, who only wanted to get him away. Hyde will continue his testimony today.

New York, Nov. 14.—James Hazen Hyde, former Vice President of the Equitable Life, whose resignation followed forward to with expectation, to which led to an investigation of insurance company methods by the Armstrong Committee, and the man whose presence before the committee had been looked forward to with expectation, to produce the greatest sensation of the investigation, appeared before the committee today.

formed for the holding of the syndicate for five years for the purpose of controlling the Union Pacific. The executive committee, was not informed of this operation as Hyde said Alexander did not think it necessary and Harriman had requested that the committee not be informed. USED OLD TRANSFER Divinity Student Arrested on Chicago Street Car.

COMPANY DEPRIVED OF FARE

Justice Holds that Using Found Transfers Is No Less Than Robbery, But Student Argues Point and Beats the Court in the Argument.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—A new point in transfer ethics was raised yesterday when Robert Morris a divinity student in Chicago University, was arraigned before Justice Callahan on charge of offering on a Cottage Grove car, a transfer which he had found in the street.

Morris was arrested by one of the detectives of the City Railway Company, who saw him attempt to use the transfer. He admitted he had found the transfer in the street and that he knew it was illegal to use it, but he said he could not see the justice of the law.

He contended that every nickel spent by the patrons of the street car company purchased the maximum ride on the company's lines and that if the original purchaser did not care to use all of that ride it could be no moral offense for another person to use what someone else had wilfully thrown away. Justice Callahan held that to ride on a transfer that had been found in the street was no less than robbery, inasmuch as the company was deprived of a nickel that otherwise would have been spent.

"Then you might as well say I rob the storekeepers when I give away an overcoat which is of no use to me, because I save the recipient of the coat the necessity of buying a new one," rejoined Morris.

The student finally agreed to meet the justice again and thrash out the question thoroughly.

"He had me going some," was Justice Callahan's comment after Morris had left the room.
